Le vieux château

With this short loop, reach great heights with little or no effort!

It offers beautiful views of the village of Rébénacq, the foothills of the Pyrenees and the plain to the north, and can be combined with the more urban circuit known as “La Bastide” (2.2 km). These two routes will give you an idea of the variety and richness of Rébénacq's heritage.

D Cross the D936 (Road to Nay) to reach Place de l'Eglise(church). Turn right onto Chemin dous Marrous and walk up to the end (passing Chemin las Bignes on your right). At the signpost, turn left onto the rural road: Chemin dous Marrous. It runs along the wall surrounding the outbuildings of the former seigneurial castle.

Oh55 3 712217E - 4782561N Follow the small road north. At the intersection, turn left onto Chemin Montoulieu, and walk all the way down. At the last houses (with a lovely view of the bastide), take the rural road of the same name on the right. Note: The second part of the route is slightly haphazard and can be very wet or even muddy during periods of heavy rain.

Oh10 1 711899E - 4782055N After 100m, turn left onto a narrower track below, alongside a large meadow. Once it has passed a bend, it goes around the top of the meadow (be careful: livestock may be present). After a second bend followed by a gate, go up the path across the field until you reach a ridge and Chemin Sansans (a second gate).

lh20 4 711656E - 4782225N At the bottom, after the farm, turn left onto Route de Bosdarros back towards the starting point. It runs along the right bank of the Nééz.

Oh35 2 712582E - 4782147N Enjoy the beautiful panoramic views, especially of the foothills of the Pyrenees, and then head north, on the flat. The path soon forks to the left and passes through a small woodland area.

At the end of the woods, climb the grassy slope to the right, staying on the edge of the woods. Go through a third gate. The path climbs gently up to the Barbet district. You are at the highest point of the walk. The GPS indicates an altitude of 414 m.

The former seigneurial castle

A local seignury is mentioned in a deed dating back to 1484. Occupying the hills to the north-east of the village, it passed through several hands until, before the French Revolution, it belonged to the Marquis of Saint-Chamans. As the Marquis went into exile in England, the property was seized in 1794 and sold as a national asset. The castle was completely dismantled by the buyer, a local master mason. A local edict then ruled that the head of each family in the village add at least one of the pieces to his own house "as a sign of solidarity with the Revolution". These remains can be found as you stroll through the bastide, like a treasure hunt! The castle on the hillside to the west of the village has a very different story: Jean-Baptiste de Bitaubé, a cadet, built it around 1775-80 after having made his fortune in trading in Cadiz. It was not disturbed during the Revolution.
